

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and method for supporting and transferring a material between a screenprint machine and an embroidery machine without having to remove the material before the designs are complete. The apparatus and method maintain the alignment of the area on the material to be embellished with the designs in both machines, thus providing a properly registered design including both screenprinting and embroidery.